Journal of Global Justice and Public Policy's (JGJPP) seal reflects JGJPP's mission – יהוה is the Hebrew tetragrammaton, which traditionally has been associated with the name of God. ἀλήθεια is the classical Greek concept of truth. Iustitia is the Latin legal principle of justice. JGJPP believes that with a knowledge of God, one is able to perceive truth, which permits the dissemination and establishment of justice. The Mercator world map represents JGJPP's global focus; and the azure border color and corresponding laurel identify JGJPP with transnational efforts to achieve international peace.

JGJPP is Regent University School of Law's premier academic journal presenting original legal research related to the study of international human rights. JGJPP features articles, notes, case comments, and book reviews submitted by prominent authors, practitioners, and students. JGJPP actively solicits manuscripts that address international law, global justice, the rule of law, public policy (foreign and domestic), international relations and diplomacy, comparative law, and decisions adopted by the European Court of Human Rights, the International Court of Justice, the Inter-American Court of Human Rights, and the International Criminal Court.

JGJPP is committed to publishing interdisciplinary scholarship critically analyzing the significant social challenges and the persistent legal issues affecting the marginalized, disenfranchised, indigent, and abused, and works in association with the Center for Global Justice, Human Rights, and the Rule of Law.

EDITORIAL POLICY STATEMENT

Journal of Global Justice and Public Policy (JGJPP) is published annually under the authority of Regent University School of Law. The views expressed in JGJPP are those of individual contributors and do not necessarily reflect the view of the editorial board, Regent University School of Law, its administration and faculty, or Regent University.

Subscriptions: If you are interested in subscribing to, purchasing advertising spaced from, or making a tax-deductible contribution to JGJPP, please address all correspondence to the official business address listed at the bottom of this page. Subscriptions costs per issue are $20.00 domestic and $28.00 foreign surface mail payable in advance.

Submissions: JGJPP welcomes the submission of scholarly articles, manuscripts, essays, book reviews and student notes and comments in all areas affecting global justice and public policy both in domestic and international law. JGJPP is interested in articles, for example, that discuss international constitutional law, international humanitarian law, international human rights law, international arbitration and international investment arbitration inter alia. Submissions to JGJPP should conform to the latest edition of The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation (20th ed. 2014). Submissions also should include the author's curriculum vitae, and a short abstract or description of the work submitted. JGJPP anticipates most articles to be between 20,000 and 35,000 words, including footnotes; and book reviews and comments to be approximately 15,000 words, including footnotes. JGJPP as a general rule, however, welcomes all submissions. JGJPP prefers electronic submissions, which may be sent either via email (jgpp@mail.regent.edu) or through ExpressO (<http://law.bepress.com/expresso/>). Please include your mailing address, telephone numbers, facsimile number and e-mail address. JGJPP will notify authors as quickly as possible as to the status of their submissions. Further information is available at jgpp.regent.edu.

Permission to Copy: All articles are copyright ©2019 Journal of Global Justice and Public Policy (ISSN 2374-491X), except where otherwise expressly indicated. For permission to reprint an article or any portion thereof, please address your written request to the holder of the copyright. For any article that JGJPP holds the copyright, permission is granted to reprint any portion of the article for educational purposes, including distribution to students, provided that in the case of copies duplicated in class, students are charged no more than the cost of duplication; the article is identified on each copy according to the most recent edition of The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation (20th ed. 2014); proper notice of copyright is affixed to each copy; and JGJPP is notified in writing.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

As we began the process of sifting through articles to publish in this volume of the Journal of Global Justice and Public Policy during the summer of 2018, and discussed with our fellow students about the research and writing they were doing, we noticed a distinct pattern. Some areas of law and advocacy were being expanded, and new human rights were being named left and right—access to food and access to medical care (which almost always includes abortion, sadly) being just two. Taken purely at face value these might be somewhat positive developments, at least in part. On the other hand, rights we frequently take for granted—or assume will be defined broadly, like speech—are being actively narrowed in telling corners of the world. Of course, the constricting of a fundamental right is always concerning. This dichotomy of expansion and contraction arose all summer, so we decided to embrace it, and selected articles that addressed those shrinking and stretching areas in law and policy. We hope you find the dichotomies discussed in this volume convicting and compelling, and that Christian attorneys worldwide are convicted to do good work in the tension.
